

A photograph of a rock specimen, likely a sedimentary rock, showing distinct horizontal layering. The upper portion of the rock is reddish-brown, while the lower portion is a lighter, greyish-tan color. There are numerous dark, irregular spots and patches scattered across the surface, possibly representing mineral inclusions or weathering. A small, white, rectangular label is placed horizontally across the middle of the rock, containing the handwritten number "12-90-9563".
